Why Zebras Have Stripes

Some scientists believe that zebras have stripes so that other animals can recognise them. Others say the black and white stripes give them camouflage against predators. A team of scientists decided to test exactly what effect the stripes had on the zebra's worst enemy: the blood-drinking horsefly¹. The team placed three sticky horse models – one white, one black and one zebra-striped – into a field with horseflies. When they counted the horseflies which landed on the models, the scientists found the zebra-striped model attracted the fewest horseflies. The scientists think all the zebra's ancestors² used to be completely black and the white stripes developed later to defend them against biting insects which transmit diseases.

(www.bbc.co.uk, upraveno)

² ancestor: předek, předchůdce

24 According to the scientists mentioned in the article, which statement is not true about zebras?

Zebras have stripes:

- A) so that animals can easily identify them.
- B) because they help them to hide from their enemies.
- C) to protect them from insects that want to drink their blood.
- D) because their black-haired ancestors² mixed with white-haired ones.

Electric Cars

Electric vehicles aren't completely silent but they're very quiet. However, there are reasons why they shouldn't be! Quiet vehicles are dangerous and accidents with these cars and pedestrians could make them less popular. On the other hand, the sound of a car isn't just about safety. It's about what people want to hear while driving. Many people like the noise of a certain gearbox¹ or engine. Car companies are studying sound possibilities but nobody can expect to hear cars that sound like spacecraft or running horses. Car companies have asked pop singers, composers and bands to write something special for them. The sound will depend on the speed and give a warning to people that a car is coming. To put it briefly: they create a 'mood' for the car.

(www.dailymail.co.uk, upraveno)

25 According to the article, which sentence is true?

- A) Electric cars aren't dangerous.
- B) Electric cars don't make any sound.
- C) The sounds of electric cars imitate spacecraft.
- D) The sounds of electric cars will be created by famous musicians.

Devonshire was later seen trying to return the stolen credit card to the car of the assistant's mother. Later that evening the teenager was caught sleeping in another car in the neighbourhood.

(www.shortnews.com, upraveno)

26 According to this article, which statement is true?

- A) The police are still looking for the teenager.
- B) The teenager tried to use a stolen credit card.
- C) The teenager returned a lost credit card to the petrol station assistant.
- D) The petrol station assistant called the police when he saw the teenager in his mother's car.

Woman Finds Feathers¹ in Chicken McNugget

When Diana Jones from Elkhart in Indiana bought lunch at her local McDonald's, sat down and bit into one of her Chicken McNuggets, she realised that her food was not just meat. "It felt like there was hair in my mouth," she said. "It was unbelievable. I looked at my meal and there were feathers coming out of the nugget." When Mrs. Jones returned the food and complained, the employees had no idea why there were feathers inside the nugget. Not satisfied with their answer, Diana Jones then contacted the company's manager who promised to investigate the situation.

(www.shortnews.com, upraveno)

27 According to the article, why did Mrs. Jones contact the McDonald's manager?

Because:

- A) she wanted her money back.
- B) only the company's manager deals with food complaints.
- C) the employees at her local McDonald's did not believe her.
- D) her local McDonald's did not know where the feathers¹ came from.

Did You Know It?

It is not so easy being an astronaut, especially if you love food. The food in space must have a long life and be easy to eat. Astronauts can't eat hot food, because in case of floating it may burn them. Considering these facts, it is not difficult to understand that the food they take into space is not the most delicious. It is either partially or completely dehydrated to prevent it from spoiling. When an astronaut is ready to eat, he can add water to rehydrate the meal. Not an easy thing to do. It's estimated that astronauts eat 70% less than people on Earth.

(www.didyounow.it, upraveno)

28 What does the text say about astronauts' food in space?

- A) Astronauts' food is dried on Earth.
- B) Astronauts' food quickly spoils in space.
- C) Astronauts need to eat more than people on Earth.
- D) Astronauts eat rehydrated food containing 70% water.

Life is for living, so take some time out and enjoy the wonders of the natural world at Edinburgh Zoo, amongst some of the world's most endangered animals!

Edinburgh Zoo opened in 1913, in leafy hillside parkland just ten minutes from the centre of Edinburgh. Recognised as one of the world's leading zoos, we are involved in many conservation breeding programmes and we give the highest priority to the welfare, both physical and behavioural, of the animals in our care. The zoo is also one of Scotland's most successful visitor attractions, second only to Edinburgh Castle in terms of paying visitors, with over 600,000 visitors a year.

Opening times

We are open every day of the year – even Christmas Day! – from 9:00 a.m. and close at the following times:

What's new?

The first painted hunting dogs have finally arrived in our zoo, and look wonderful in their brand new enclosure in the south-west corner of the zoo! The five sisters, born in November 2002, arrived on 29 May from Berlin Zoo and have settled in really well. The dogs were once common in Africa, with numbers over 500,000 in 39 countries. The effects of human activities have drastically reduced their numbers during the past forty years. Currently, an estimated 3000 dogs remain, and they are now listed as 'endangered' on the IUCN red list of threatened species. They are at Edinburgh Zoo as part of a European Endangered Species Programme, and we hope to receive three males to join the group next year.

Come, see and enjoy!

America's Luckiest Stamp Find

The first United States airmail stamp has an interesting history. The 24-cent stamp with a blue aeroplane known as “Jenny” in a red frame was first printed on 13th May 1918. Over one million of the stamps were sold including one sheet¹ of stamps where the aeroplane was printed upside down. These stamps later became known as the “inverted² Jenny” stamps. And how did it happen? As the stamps were printed in two colours, each sheet had to be put in the printing press twice. From time to time it happened that the aeroplane was printed upside down. Printing inspectors destroyed the bad sheets but one sheet containing a hundred stamps escaped their attention. Nowadays, there are only ninety inverted Jenny stamps among collectors. What has happened to the others is not known.

William T. Robey became a part of history on 14th May, 1918. On his lunch hour he hurried to the post office on New York Avenue in Washington to get some of the newly-issued airmail stamps. When the post office clerk showed him a sheet of the new stamps, Robey's heart almost stopped because all one hundred stamps on the sheet were printed with the aeroplane flying upside down. Instead of buying just one or two stamps, Robey paid $24 for the whole sheet and quickly left the post office.

Excited by his find, Robey told his friends about the discovery and asked them to help him look for other rejects in the city's post offices, but they found none. In fact, no other inverted Jenny stamp has ever been found. Robey was a stamp collector and knew that the government could confiscate³ his new stamps, so he decided to sell them to a well-known collector, Colonel Green. Unfortunately, Colonel Green was away in Texas, so Robey contacted a stamp dealer in Philadelphia. The dealer bought the whole sheet of stamps from Robey for $15,000. A week later, the same stamp dealer sold the sheet to Colonel Green for $20,000! Green later broke up the sheet so that other collectors could get some of the stamps.

P.S. Some of the readers may be wondering why the clerk in the post office didn't see the error on the stamps. The answer is simple. It was 1918, and the clerk had never seen an aeroplane before.
